

Washington State Genealogical Society
recognizes

Sandra Profitt McBride

of East Wenatchee, Washington

for outstanding efforts in the identification and preservation of historical documents of importance and value to researchers interested in the Wenatchee Area

Sandra “Sandie” Profitt McBride is recognized for her outstanding efforts in the identification and preservation of historical documents of importance and value to researchers interested in the Wenatchee Area.

When Ms. McBride retired and returned to her childhood hometown of Wenatchee from Seattle in 2005, she admirably continued to help the Seattle Genealogical Society complete a ten-year project of indexing King County court records. Upon joining WAGS, she jumped into another long-term project scanning old marriage records from Chelan and Douglas Counties. With great attention to detail and patience, she verified records of the local cemetery and internments, also.

Ms. McBride is currently serving on the WAGS board of directors as a Member-at-Large and is coordinating the huge task of the society's website conversion. She is a conscientious member of the library committee and frequently helps as a librarian.

Recognizing the time and dedication Ms. McBride has given to preserving information of genealogical importance, she richly deserves this recognition.

Given this 15th day of August in the year 2014, at the annual meeting of the Washington State Genealogical Society at Arlington, Washington.
